

Field Notebook — Page 1

These notes were written by hand and later scanned to a flat image. No selectable text layer exists in the file, so the import pipeline must transcribe from the picture.

The structure engine should still recover a heading and several paragraphs from what it can read in the image.

Observation: the tide reached the marked stone at noon.

A second scanned sheet continues the record. Lines of text sit on an off-white background to mimic real paper.

Observation: cloud cover increased through the afternoon and the temperature fell by roughly four degrees.
